Jai Ho! Omega Slumdogs Roll To Victory!

Trailer 34 news agency announced today the Omega Slumdogs are winners of the 2009 Omega Bowling Championship. The Slumdogs, who edged Operations in game one of the tournament by a razor thin margin, pulled away during game two, offering a knockout blow in frame six of three strikes and three spares, finishing the game with an impressive 868 points.

"In the end, we did it for Val," said Slumdog member Charles Waltermeyer, referring to his former co-worker and often jester of the Main Office who always vowed to see the day that the Operations team would go down in defeat. The Slumdog team, comprised of Charles Waltermeyer, Mayor Andy Milford, Adam Simon, Rob Ellsworth, Randal Roberts and Brett Bevell rolled with consistent precision each frame, as if it was written in the Akashic Records that they were des-tinued to win.

"The only thing we need to decide now is where will the trophy go," said a jubilant Adam Simon. "I think it has Teen Camp written all over it."

The trophy, which is typically brought to the alley by the winning team of the previous year, was forgotten by the Operations team members. And some thought this slight error was a foreshadowing of the evenings events.

"They never forget the trophy," said Staff Programs Coordinator Brett Bevell. "And when I heard that they did, I knew that they were a little rattled and off without their leader Skip Backus."

The Omega CEO was prevented by fate, or perhaps the spirit of Val, from attending the acclaimed event, due to a previously scheduled event in New York City. Still even with an averaging of the scores without their leader, the Operations team came up short both games.

"They should have been penalized for not bringing the trophy," said Trailer Park Mayor Andy Milford. "But luckily, we won even without any penalty being imposed. It was a fair and honest victory, just like all my elections so far."
