John of God Changes Fashion: Psychedelic Tie Dye Clothing In

T34 news agency reported today that John of God will not be wearing his typical all white attire when he is performing healings at Omega Institute. The noted healer has made it clear instead that this year in honor of the 40th anniversary of Woodstock he will be wearing hippie tie dye attire instead.

In a statement issued to the press yesterday, Medium Joao as he is often called, stated that the entities who work through him love rock music and want to honor the fact they are so close to the vicinity of where the historic three day Woodstock Music and Peace festival occurred 40 years ago. When asked if he could see people's auras without the white attire, he responded that Jimmie Hendrix is now one of the channeled entities he works with, and that late guitarist can help John of God see through any variation of color, especially any type of purple haze.

To compliment this process Omega Institute has invited numerous rock star impersonators to attend the four day event, with the hope that John of God can cure them of wanting to be anyone other than themselves.

"We are looking at a plan to put everyone in Main Field," said Omega CEO Skip Backus. "We'll pass out tarps and blankets so that anyone who doesn't have housing or a tent site can still remain on campus. Still, we have no expectation that we will reach the 300,000 person audience that the original Woodstock concert achieved in the summer of 1969."

Richie Havens, the great 1960's musician who has often been sought after as an Omega Hermitage resident, has agreed to open for John of God with a rendition of his hit Freedom, which was also the opening song for the original Woodstock concert.

The AV department will be recording the entire event and has planted an electric guitar at the back of Main Hall just in case Jimmie Hendrix does incorporate into John of God with any inspiring current of music.

Rumor has it that Izzy has been so inspired by the idea, he is considering taking the Dharma Bums to Brazil this winter to record an album with the noted healer..
